LONDON, July 15-Half of Europe is insolvent and the whole continent is poor. Taxation is heavy, and, so far as the mainland is concerned, little is being done to meet the obligations incurred by the victorious countries in the war. But there are more men under arms on the continent of Europe today than prior to the war. In addition to expenditure on armies, all the nations of Europe with the exception of those vanquished in the late war, who, fortunately, are bound hand and foot under the peace treaties, are spending much money on the new arm of the air. America, Japan, Great Britain, France and Italy are carrying out substantial warship building programs.

Take the case of Britain. This year she is spending on her navy $300,000,000. This is actually more than before the war, when she was faced with the whole might of the German navy concentrated in the North Sea: while in addition she is spending $100,000,000 a year on her air service. This represents an entirely new expenditure, as the for- State Officials Lay Seasonmer costs of the naval and military wings of the rudimentary flying brees in existence in 1914 were one in the naval and military

Producers Refuse to Buy Cinema Rights for Several Sensational Plays on Broadway

This is the first of seven articles to appear daily on the constructive aspects of the motion picture industry.

By RUFUS STEELE NEW YORK, July 27-A dozen much-discussed plays that held Broadway stages for many months came to the end of the season without their motion picture rights having been disposed of.

A dozen of those works of fiction that have been conspicuous in the bookshops, some of them among the "best sellers," are proving that in the picture mart they are worse off than "worst sellers" since they have not demonstrated any film value at all. The situation is perhaps the most novel and interesting this

LORD MILNER'S CREDO APPEARS ·IN THE TIMES

Striking Document by Great British Statesman Deals With Imperialism

By Cable from Monitor Bureau LONDON, July 27-The late Lord Milner's political creed in the form of a fragmentary note appears on the editorial page of The Times today and is described therein as "the conscious political faith of the best The corn crop forecast places it at and most thoughtful of the patriots of the Empire, and the half-conor unconscious belief of all At the reserve banks the seasonal its children at home or beyond the demand for credit and curency was seas." It is a striking document and reads as follows:

reads as follows:

Credo. The key to my position.

I am a nationalist and not a cosmopolitan. This seems to be becoming more and more the real dividing line of parties. A nationalist is not a man who necessarily thinks his nation better than others. He does not think his duty is to his own nation and its development. He have nation and its development. He be-lieves that this is the law of human progress; that the competition be-tween nations, each seeking its maximum development is the divinc order of world, the law of life and progress. I am British—indeed pri-marity English—Nationalist. If I am also an imperialist, it is because the destiny of the English race, owing to its insular position and long supremacy at sea, has been to strike fresh roots in distant parts of the

My patriotism knows no geographical, but only racial limits. I am an imperialist and not a "little Englander," because I am a British race patriot. It seems unnatural to me—I think it is impossible from my point of view—to lose interest in, and attachment to my fellow-countrymen because they settle across the sea.

My norizon must widen, that is all. I fee horizon must widen, that is all. I feel myself a citizen of the empire. I feel that Canada is my country, Australia is my country, New Zealand my country, South Africa my country, just as much as Surrey or Yorkshire. We are told that there is no such thing as citizenship of the empire. In a purely juridical sense that may be true. Juridical definitions may be true. Juridical definitions spring out of, and no doubt streng-then, and to some extent stereotype existing human relationships. The do not create them. The tendency to moriogamy led to the institution of marriage. When men's political re-lationships were bounded by a province, citizenship was limited town. In time it was widened. There is such a thing as the citizenship of a country. It is only a question of time when the expansion of the race will compel a new judicial conception, that of the common citizenship of oil countries which that race inhabits or controls.

The wider patriotism is no here exalted sentiment. It is a practical necessity, even from the viewpoint of a "Little England" — England, nay more, Great Britain, nay more, the United Kingdom is no longer the power in the world which it once was, or in isolation is dapable of remaining in power at all It is of remaining in power at all. It is no longer even self-supporting.

Dominions Self-Sufficient

But the British dominions as whole are not only self-supporting; they are more nearly self-sufficient than any other political entity in the world, that is if they can be kept an entity, if their present loose fragile organizations can be made tenacious though elastic. This brings us to our first great principle -follow the race. The British state must follow the race, must comprehend it wherever it settles in appreciable numbers as an independent community. If the swarms constantly being thrown off (Continued on Page 3. Column 8)

"Government in Massachusetts would be relieved of a load of some $25,000,000 today were all money due paid into the city and town treas-uries and from them to the State, which assumes their burden in di-recting the collection of taxes. This is easy to see when it is remembered that each year the cities and towns nave expenses aggregating about $170,000,000, and this, therefore, is the sum they seek to raise through taxation.

Now, it must be remembered this $170,000,000 is appropriated in the budget of coming expenditures for each year and yet the real money, the $170,000,000 to be raised by tax-ation, is not collected until late in the fall and much of it not until the year following and part not even

Add this to the $5,000,000 paid year on the $170,000,000 expended by the cities and towns and for which they pay 3 per cent when they borrow it to use before the taxes come in and you see why the State today is about $25,000,000 behind on Government through delinquent tax payment and equally deinquent tax collections.

"Today delinquent taxpayers owe the Commonwealth of Massachusetts not less than $10,000,000," continued Commissioner Long. "This delinquency is for all unabated taxes prior to 1924. Were I to include 1924 in my rough calculation, I should say that taxpayers owe the Common-wealth and their own municipalities not less than $20,000,000.

unlikely to be completed. But the naval representatives of the powers concerned in the Washington Conference were not so easily beaten. They were compelled to bow to the forces of public opinion where the building of great armored ships was concerned, but they had their way with cruisers. The British Admiralty was naturally tender on this point owing to the dependence of Britain on overseas supplies of food and raw material for her very life. No limit, therefore, was set on the number of cruisers to be built by any nation able to scrape together the necessary money or credit. All that was done was to limit the size of the ships and the size of the guns. This was to be a displacement of 10,000 tons and no bigger gun than the 8inch was to be mounted.

A new conference on armaments generally is urgently required. This tree is called Æsculus parviflora, and is a native of the southern states, being most common in Alabama. When the 9 o'clock closing hour came so many people were still in the galleries that we had to postpone the closing until a quarter to 10-and then they didn't want to go.

There was tremendous interest in the furniture. In the savings shown on the price tags. In the Little Budget Home where the budgets are made which bring with them the privilege of extended credit.

Strolling in couples and family groups over the four galleries of furniture, the people enjoyed the great display as they would enjoy an exposition. They got ideas from the many furnished rooms. They asked questions. They learned how to make their own homes better-saving money at the same time. They were delighted to find so much furniture at a fourth, a third and a half less. They appreciated that the 10 per cent reductions were on the staple furniture, which is never reduced except in these sales-and they were glad to make that saving.

Every Wednesday Is Furniture Night -when the Furniture Galleries are open until 9 o'clock. And because so many people have requested it,

The Restaurant Will Be Open, Too

Give all the time you can to the furniture, for it is the most noteworthy display we have ever made, and prices are lower than they will be again on such variety and completeness for at least another six months.

These night openings are planned for those who, because of business, must do their shopping on Saturday afternoons, but who are now prevented because the Store is closed all day

Movement to Rate Primary Work With That in High Schools Is Gaining

Adoption of the same salary scale for all teachers in the grades and loads of books. Miss Guerrier points high schools is being recognized and out that an automobile would make adopted by towns in Massachusetts it possible to serve a larger terri- of the fifth annual conference of on the ground that the work of the tory teacher in grade one is as important as that of the teacher in the high school, the Massahcusets Department of Education states.

This fact has long been recognized by the teachers throughout the country and has been pushed to a successful conclusion in some localities outside of Massachusetts. In Boston the teachers declare it is an issue that is bound to come before the public in the course of a few years but that the public thought is not ready for it at the present time Boston teachers will, therefore, continue their efforts to obtain adequate salary adjustments along traditional FOR METERS MAY COST lines of higher salaries for high school teachers and lesser salaries for teachers of the lower grades.

In-the meantime there is a stead ily growing recognition that it is more important to have the best teachers in the primary grades than in the high schools. This is for two reasons; because little children are more open to influence and direction than older children and it is there-fore vitally essential that that influence and direction, both ethical and intellectual, be of the highest order obtainable, and because more chil-dren are brought under the influence of the school in the primary grades than reach the high school.

While teachers' salaries are not increasing so rapidly as was the case a few years ago, when the sudden-depreciation of the dollar caused a situation that was acute and turned many teachers from the classroom to industry, facts brought out by reports received at headquarters show plainly that salary increases, through revision schedules, still are under way.

Higher Salaries; Better Service Not only Boston but many other are adopting salary ratings for their school teachers that means an annual increase in the budgets for salaries for several years to come. These new schedules also mean that the towns or cities in question, some of which have had very poorly paid and therefore very inadequate teachers, now will be able to have trained, experienced teachers, capable of rendering a high type of service in the nunities they serve. In order to encourage further training of teachers in service, many 1516 K ST., N. W., WASHINGTON, B. More generous provision for the continuance of salary payments during periods of enforced absence has been made by several towns. The idea, Miss Guerrier explained to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor, is to take the library into an area that it has not pene-trated before. For one reason or another, perhaps because they are new to the ways of their adopted country, many residents of the South End have never been made properly acquainted with books. They do not realize the treasures that are to be had at the library for the asking.

The pushcart library is a branch of the Tyler Street Library in the South End and both are under the direction of the Boston Public Library. The idea originated with Miss Wills, of Lincoln House. If it were possible to adopt the methods of venders of vegetables and fish, taking the books to the very doors of possible patrons, many might be induced to read who otherwise would not, she resumed. The pushcart library, therefore, came into being, and a bell was one of its chief ad-EQUITY FAVORED juncts. It figured conspicuously on the first day as a means of attracting attention, but it was silent on the second. Nobody needed it.

Miss Guerrier said that the library's plan is to handle the district as many villages are handled throughout the State. Communities that have no libraries of their own county or large town libraries, who tory with a larger collection of the Interallied Veterans' Federation, books and would be a real civic which will be held in Rome from

The traveling library, she said, is not for children. It is exclusively for grown-ups. The children can come to Tyler Street. The library officials want to get them into the habit of coming so that in later years they will not need a pushcart library. In the meantime, and perhaps always, there will be some for whom the pushcart will be needed, and it should be extended to other parts of the city, Miss Guerrier says.

It is not denied that the first is denied that there has ever been any great difficulty in arriving at a just appraisal. The line of demarcation between the clean and the unclean was too plain to admit of extended argument even where the opseemed very large.

Various subterfuges were tried. One producer who had hastily bought the rights to a successful but sensational novel was told that the story could not be approved on account of the situation about which the plot revolved. There is a greater degree of responsibility on picture producers for the effect that their product will have attained anything like moral perfecupon the minds of those who view it than there is on either the novelist or the dramatist. The man who produces a stage play appeals to a more or less limited group. Not everyone can or will pay $2 for a novel or to attend a dramatic performance. But everyone can - and nearly everyone does-pay the small price that secures admission to the picture theater. A book is a great success if, in its final printing, it reached 100,000 copies. Yet a motion picture, were it distributed throughout the country in any one week, would be seen by 500 times that number

hensive of it. When his attention was drawn to the situation Mr. Hays declared that to allow "Abraham Lincoln" to fall would be seriously to injure the cause of good pictures. Accordingly used the powers of his office to get the industry behind the picture, to promote adequate distribution arrangements and to awaken the interest of organizations and influential persons in many cities and communities, with the result that "Abraham Lincoln" is now thrilling the country as its producers hoped it would and is bringing them a highly satisfactory reward for their en-

Automatic Rejections

During the 15 months since the clean pictures resolutions were adopted, more than 100 plays and books have found themselves, by direct rejection or automatically, outside the pale. As might be supposed, authors and publishers are beginning to take notice in earnest, for in many instances the largest revenue from a successful story comes from the picture rights. Recently a publisher brought to the Hays office the manuscript of a novel which he was about to bring out. It repre-sented the student life at a certain leading university as consisting mainly of drinking, gambling and rough parties.

The publisher was told that the book could not be filmed. Thereupon he offered to cut out everything objectionable, but when an outline of

He admitted that the proletarian revolution in the West was slowing up, but professed to see brighter prospects in the East, especially in China. Russian industry, he declared was developing very rapidly under Socialist forms of production, but on the other hand the Communists had been compelled to make certain important oncessions to the individualistic in-

"There are four figures which we must constantly keep in mind in analyzing the domestic situation," said Mr. Zinovieff. "Seventy-two to 75 per cent of pre-war industrial production; more than a quarter of a mil-lion unemployed industrial workers; 40 per cent of peasants without

Mr. Zinovieff observed that the recent decisions of the Soviet Government which permit the kulak to hire labor and lease land more freely would have seemed unthinkable a few years ago, but defended them on the ground that it was necessary to stimulate agricultural production and the peasants.

THE length of time that it takes to produce a work of art is a question that interests the layman. It also is a question that disturbs the painter, because it is impossible for him to estimate the time. On the other hand Edward Redfield will often paint a picture in what the artists call "one go." He apparently works rapidly and his work has the freshness of an impression, quickly, surely and joyfully projected: his brush unconsciously obeying the dictates of a sure vision. But much more time is probably expended on his picture than the mere be paid not only according to his ability, but also according to his painting of it. Fundamental Consideration The differences which I found in

Utopia may all be ascribed, I think, to the fundamental consideration, of which the Utopians have never lost sight, that the word "doctor means nothing but teacher and that the whole method of training men and women for the doctorate should be adjusted to the needs and ideals of the teaching profession. What we are accustomed to call "pure scholarship" is by no means ignored in Utopia, but it is always strictly sub-ordinated to education, which is really a somewhat different thing. Realizing as they do that the doctor of philosophy is to be first of all a teacher, that he is going forth from the university to train other teachers who will put their impress upon still others in turn, the Utopians feel that it is of the utmost importance that his sense of relative values be just and sound. Not only, therefore, do they sedulously avoid doing anything which might distort this but they strive to improve whatever instinct on he may have. A teacher of literature, say they, should possess and should be able to convey to others an instinct for the best, and they do not see that he is likely to he much assisted to this end by being required to spend two or three years in concentration upon the second and third rate. A teacher, they say again, does his proper work largely by means of expression of one sort and another. They do not see that he is adequately trained for this by spending a prolonged period of time in mere acquisition. They go so far as to assert that no one can be a true teacher unless he is able both to write and to speak with grace, force, nd ease. The more I think about hese opinions the less ridiculous

The final oral examination for the doctor's degree in the University of Utopia is much more difficult than ! any given in America or in Europe. The candidate has been thoroughly tested in all such minor matters as the ancient languages, literary history, biography, and the like, before ne comes up for this last ordeal. It has already been decided that he has apaitude had been trained to a point the scholarly equipment demanded of where it could be utilized in, and the scholarly equipment demanded of aspirants to the degree, so that the field is cleared for more important matters. that quiet sculptor whose that quiet sculptor whose chisel wrought such delightful magic with huge blocks of granite and marble? His was a twofold genius that quiet sculptor whose pretentious mediocrity." In his poem, "Work," Woolner freely expresses his deep-rooted belief in honest effort and right achievement: The fairy-coloured ropes, in fear marble? His was a twofold genius overflowing in distinct and separate channels. In the midst of his busy early London days in the little Stanhope Street studio where he worked during the years that immediately followed his apprenticeship to the great master, Behmes, he dreamed rosy dreams, in which he saw him-self offering the world a gracious gift of poetry as well as heroic bronzes, finely executed bas-reliefs and carefully wrought portrait medallions. 4 4. 4

Undoubtedly it was Woolner's pertinacious desire to become a poet that caused him to identify himself with that eager group of young enthusiasts who called themselves the "Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood," believing that they were to revolution-ize both painting and literature. In the long hours spent with these congenial associates in Rossetti's studio, Woolner's ambition was realized to such a degree that he was allowed space in the little magazine that the brotherhood published for several of his poems. In the very first issue of the periodical, "The Germ," as it was called by the Pre-Raphaelites, Thomas Woolner found himself in the company of Coventry Patmore, Christina Rossetti and several other poets whose work had already weathered the sharp criticism that met every new venture of that particular period.

SENTIMENT IN STOCK MARKET STILL BULLISH

Favorable Reports on Business Send Prices Upward Again

NEW YORK, July 27 (4)-Rising rices characterized the opening of the new week in the stock market. Frisco common advanced 24 points on the initial sale to a new high record at 91%, and White Motors and Midland Steel Products attained new peak prices at $3½ and 125 re-spectively. Standard industrials also displayed a firm tone.

Bullish sentiment was created by he publication of the Federal Reserve Sank summary of business conditions. showing wholesale trade in June to be the largest of any June in the last five years, and by the rising tendency of various commodity price indices.

Mack Trucks crossed 204 to a new record peak, and was quickly followed into new high ground by Remington Typewriter, Coca Cola, and Famous Players.
Motor stocks were strong on reports that the new models were being favorably received, Maxwell B certificates and Chrysler each advancing 21/2 points, and the Pierce Arrow issues bout a point each in the first half our of trading. Buying of the equipments was in anticipation of heavy railroad orders next month, when several of the larger roads are expected to announce their 1926 requirements. Establishment of a new high record by Danish kroner around 22.75 cents featured the opening of the firm for-eign exchange market. Demand ster-ling was quoted around $4.85 % and French francs at 4.72 cents.

In contrast with the general upward trend of prices were outbursts of heavy profit-taking in the oil and baking stocks. Pan-American Petroleum issues were hammered down more than 2 points each, Independent Oil & Gas broke 4 points, and General Baking 6. This selling, however, failed to discourage bullish demonstrations in other sections of the list. Frisco common and preferred were the most conspicuous features in the rail group, both mounting more than 2 points to new high levels.

Call money renewed at 4 per cent.

Bond Market Steady After a week of steadily declining prices, the bond market manifested a steadier tone as trading was resumed today.

Active buying of Frisco, "Katy" and other moderately priced southwestern railroad issues, based on constructive favorable merger and dividend developments, featured the early deal-rings.

Keeping pace with a brisk rise in Frisco shares to new high levels, the road's income and adjustment bonds scored substantial gains, while "Katy" adjustment 5s also moved rapidly

Marked irregularity cropped out in spots, however, with Pan American and other convertible oil bonds declining in sympathy with a sharp break in these stocks. Foreign and U. S. Government obligations were

FIRMER PRICE TENDENCY IN STEEL MARKET

Structural Material Is in Good Demand-Pig Iron . Inquiry Improves

NEW YORK, July 27 (Special)-A betterment in the raw materials is the latest optimistic feature in the steel industry.

Iron and steel scrap, which is freluently considered an indicator for the industry, has been in excellent demand at higher prices over the

About 30,000 tons of heavy melting steel scrap was purchased by Pitts-burgh mills, some of it at $19 a ton, which is $1 higher than a week be-

Coke in the Connellsville region is from 10 to 15c a ton higher, inconse-quential in itself, but showing the quential in itself, but showing the upward tendency. Pig Iron has not yet made any definite advance, but inquiry has improved—considerably over the week, the stimulus being the threatened coal strikes in England and this country. Likewise the strike in the metal industry of Belgium has some effect on the American market. A sudden spurt has taken place in fabricated structural steel, awards totaling 52,000 tons, compared with a previous average for July of about 20,000 tons weekly. Demand for rails has increased considerably, with 100,000 tons under negotiation or recently 000 tons under negotiation or recently bought, the largest tennage having been for the Norfolk & Western, which took 27,000 tons from the U.S. Steel Corporation and 20,000 tons from the Bethlehem Steel Corpora-tion.

Stocks of Steel Low

Sellers of steel in the east usually report that July business is slightly below that for June, but for the country as a whole the volume is about

The most optimistic feature is the low store of steel in the hands of consumers which will have to be replenished soon. Once prices prove that they have reached bottom there that they have reached bottom there may be a scramble to take care of future needs.

Though steel sheets have advanced in Ohio and points east, other steel items are still barely holding their own with a few recessions still reported. Thus light steel rails are down $2, a ton at 1.60c a pound. Pittsburgh. Some items have dropped at Chicago by $1 to $2 a ton, including iron bars and blue-annealed and galvanized sheets.

On ordinary tonnages steel plates are unchanged at 1.85c to 1.99c a pound, though rairroads have obtained pound, though rairroads have obtained concessions recently, the Pennsylvania Railroad having bought 4000 tons and the Philadelphia & Reading 1500 tons at 1.80c. The $2 a ton concession in steel bars, which had been obtained 10 days ago by some of the automobile makers, has not been duplicated since, and the price is still quotable at 2c, Pittsburgh.

Zinc rose steadily during the week until the last day when a recession of $1 a ton took place, closing prices being 7½c a pound, East St. Louis. The galvanizers are working at about 35 per cent of capacity.

First Wage Reduction

Today the Lukens Steel Company.
Coatesville, Pa., prominent plate maker, will reduce wages for both mill and clerical employees, the first wage reduction in the steel industry this year to date. The exact amount has not yet been announced.

One of the most interesting events of the week was the appearance of German competition in cast iron pipe. When the Department of Water Supply, Gas & Electricity of New York opened bids on 6000 tons of water pipe, it was found that the Gilsenkirchen Bergwerks, of Germany was the lowest bidder on the entire iot, the first time that Germans have bid on pipe in this country since the war, if not the first time in history.

The French maker of Pont-a-Mous, son, who has been active in the son, who has been active in the American market for a year, bid on only one item of pipe and was next low after the Germans. On some of

Iron Competition Keen

The pig iron makers are puzzled because prices have not advanced, and are inclined to blame the importers of foreign iron. Thus Indian iron is being sold along the Atlantic seaboard at $20 to $20.50 a ton, duty paid, and as long as that condition holds prices cannot be moved up.

Considerable iron has been sold into New England during the last few days, the total in 10 days amounting to $000 tons with the heating equipment makers the most active takers. Buffalo makers cut prices to compete with foreign iron. Thus No. 2 plain iron was sold at $18.25, furnace, a concession of 75c a ton from the suponcession of 75c a ton from the sup-osed market quotation.

The steel industry in general has The steel industry in general has been working at 60 per cent of capacity through July as compared with 142 per cent in July, 1924. The tendency in steel making is now toward an increase. The Steel Corporation is operating a little better than 65 per cent of capacity, compared with 94 per cent early this year.

Lead in Strong Position

Lead In Strong Position

The chief interest in the non-ferrous metals has been in lead. The American Smelting & Refining Company put into operation two advances of $2 a ton each, bringing its contract price to $20c a pound, New York. Lead prices in the so-called outside market rose to greater heights, sales for strictly prompt lead being made as high as $.75c, New York. Consumers of lead are not well covered as to future needs.

Copper was at unchanged levels all

Copper was at unchanged levels all week, following the net advance of %c a pound the previous week. On Friday prices took a severe drop at London in view of the threatened coal strike. American prices were weakened in tone as a result but not in actual quotations. Buying was very moderate through the week.

Zinc rose steadily during the week.

Philadelphia baseball fans are today inting with confidence to the record the Philadelphia Athletics in the American League race during the pastwo weeks in comparison to that of the Washington champions who are press ing them for the lead. The present leaders have won 11 games and lost only two while Washington has won and lost four. That is a sain of games for the Athletics in two

That Philadelphia outclassed the Senators in games won and lost in the last two weeks is of course laid to the inability Women for Team of the two Washington veterans to stay in the game but at least the race is more interesting than ever, now. with only a half game separating the Senators from the lead and both teams confident of winning.

The race has practically settled down to these two teams as Chicago in third place is 10 and one-half games behind Washu ton and there is small chance of gaining that much on either of

With the problem of the team out of the way, the selection committee is confronted with the task of ranking the players on the basis of their 1925 performances. Under the women's international team trouby agreement first two teams. first two teams.

As in the case of the National League three separate races are in order in the American. Washington and Philadelphia are far ahead of the other clubs. Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis are close together and are players on each team will meet the corresponding players on the opposing team in singles and the No. 3 rames ahead of the sixth place holde and Cleveland and New York are having a hard fight for sixth place players on each team will meet in one singles match. Two doubles combinations from each team will meet in the doubles.

The committee has no difficulty in the next in the players in the present the Boston is practically a minus quantity and cannot expect anything bet than last place. LAND DRIFTING THEORY TO GET TEST BY RADIO

World-Wide Check by Time Signals Will Be Used by Geodesists

WASHINGTON, July 27 - Some natural scientists believe that North and South America are drifting westward and that Greenland and Canada are gradually separating ac-cording to Maj. William Bowie, chief of the division of Geodesy of the United States Coast and Geodotic Survey, in an interview in which he discusses the proposal of using ra-dio time signals to test the validity of this theory.

"Personally, I do not believe in this theory," states Major Bowie, "but accurate radio longitudinal determinations, repeated at intervals of five, 10 or other groups of years, will surely prove whether the theory is true or false. Most of us, however, believe that the earth's crust is so solid and strong that there is no possibility of one continent moving away from another like icebergs can separate."

This suggested use of radio, obviously, offers spectacular possibilities. However, no less a distinguished natural scientific body than the International Geodetic and Geophysical Union, at its meeting in Madrid, Spain, during October, 1924, formulated plans to make longitude de-terminations for a number of stations located around the earth. Time signals, flashed by radio from powerful transmitting stations, will be used in making precise measure-ments of distances in terms of longitudes. "In this way." explains Major Bowie in discussing this world-wide plan to employ radio in making astronomic longitudes, "there will be a closed circuit, thus insuring elimination of even the small errors inci-dent to longitude work. There may be six or eight separate differences in longitude between each two contiguous stations and the sum these differences must add a total of 360 degrees. Many nations will par-ticipate in this world-wide radio longitude net and, as a result, each country uill have its base station for lognitude determinations maintained with greater accuracy than was possible by means of the old methods of transmitting time sig-nals over cables and telegraph lines.

"Much preliminary work must be done before this world-wide plan is initiated, but it is hoped that observations will begin late in 1926. The base station determined from this work will serve as an initial point for surveys, maps, and charts behind? Neither can we. for the countries of the world. There is, too, a more spectacular side than merely furnishing base stations for islands are drifting around with respect to each other.

"All of the above is related to accurate determinations of longitudes when even hundredths of a second must be considered. But there is vastly more difference in longitude determinations each day in which radio plays the major rôle. This is in connection with naviga-tions of thousands of ships over oceans daily. Captains of vessels must obtain their longitudes and latitudes if the weather is clear. must obtain their longitudes and latitudes if the weather is clear. the time signals. Before the use of radio time signals, each ship had to carry several high-grade chronometers, with which the captain could obtain the Greenwich time. With the use of radio a very much cheaper chronometer or a high-grade watch can employed in securing the longitude of the ship in connection with radio Bo time signals. Radio, as a sort of! desert of Sahara, or in the steppes

"Irrespective of his location, an explorer or mariner is within hearing distance of some powerful radio ansmitting station which is sending time signals, thus enabling him to map his route with far greater facility and accuracy than before the invention of radio communication. It may be said that today radio is an absolute necessity in all major mapping and charting activities, in navigation and in exploration.

408. I have built four Browning-Drake sets, the last set using Browning-Drake coils. I have also used a factory-built Browning-Drake set. All five sets worked about the same, very good—with one exception. I helped my nelghbor build a two-stage tuned R. F. set using five tubes. We flave a local radio station using $500-1000 watts. The tuned R. F. set tunes out the local radio station using $500-1000 watts. The tuned R. F. set tunes out the local within 10 points on the dial. I have used forrect by-pass condensers in the nerial. What can I do to get past the local station without using so much dial? For all-round use and expense I like the Browning-Drake set best, but I feel it should une out the local station better—J. B. Lensing. Mich.

Neverthess we have found this latter set in our wan experience to tune as sharply as the ordinary set of the type you describe. A savetrap might be tried in your antenna vircuit. Speaking of sharp tuning, we have one Browning-Drake set now in use to home which tunes far more sharply han a very good superheterodyne we re also using so we know that if the right combination of units is struck with his latter set that excellent selectivity is obtained.

EDITORIALS

The real value of the series of articles which begins in this newspaper today, under the title,

The Future of Motion Pictures

'What's Right With the Movies," lies in the fact that those who read what is, primarily, a defense of the motion picture industry, or art, or whatever it may be called, in the United States, as it is conducted today, will unavoidably be led to devote to the problem that serious thought which its importance demands. At no previous period in history has there developed so suddenly anywhere any form of amusement which has attracted those of all walks of life. The motion picture has grown into almost universal popularity. It is even doubted if the radio attracts and holds, for hours at a time, any larger or more interested audiences than the screen. It is but logical and natural, therefore, when one realizes and takes into account the origin and development of the motion picture from its humble and inconspicuous beginning, that in its expansion into what is claimed for it by its promoters and exploiters as being a high-class and irreproachable entertainer and educator, it has been beset by many vicissitudes and has undergone many phases of maltreatment and abuse.

In endeavoring to place an appraising value upon the motion picture today it is necessary, if one wishes to be absolutely impartial and just, to consider the road by which it has come. As water cannot rise above its source, so is it next to impossible for the expression of an ideal to rise above the mental and moral standard of those who give it utterance, no matter in what shape or form. In the United States, at least for many years, the production and distribution of motion pictures was carried on under no other supervision or censorship than that imposed by a careless and indifferent public. It was not until it was made apparent by the more progressive and high-minded producers, of whom there always have been some, that the silent drama, as it was somewhat fancifully called, could be made capable of appealing to a refined and discriminating public taste, that there was undertaken any serious movement to elevate and dignify the industry. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that there remain some still engaged in the production of picture films who find it impossible to conform to what has come to be recognized as a fairly well-established popular standard.

It is explained in the course of the articles to be published just what steps have been taken by producers, and generally by the exhibitors, to purge the industry of all offensive or detracting influences. It can hardly be claimed by those who have been active in working these reforms that they have been actuated solely by altruistic motives. The great motivating influence has been American public opinion, ably supported, for the most part, by the opinion of patrons in other countries. There was a time, quite recently, when the whole motion-picture industry was threatened with disaster because of the contempt in which the products offered were held by the public, or by that influential portion of the public without whose continued approbation and support the industry could not have long prospered, even if it had survived. Those responsible representatives of tremendous investments of wealth which had been attracted by the prospective or actual profits of the business were quick to discover the direction of the straws in the wind. As a result there was at once established a voluntary censorship and collective supervision which have virtually revolutionized the industry and brought to it a dignity and stability which it did not formerly

It may therefore be said that whatever "is right with the movies" is traceable to a morally effective public supervision. This supervision has not been directly interposed except in a few of the states and communities, but it has been emphatic and comprehensive, nevertheless. Yet it must be admitted that it has not accomplished all that it should. Possibly it has not accomplished all that it will. This remains to be seen. Similarly to the query, "What's Wrong With the Movies?" the answer might be "Lack of Unanimity and Determination in Public Supervision." No fact has been more clearly established than that in the motion picture house, as well as in the legitimate theater or in the library, the patrons may demand and receive only the best.

It is undeniable that the standard of popular thought throughout the world has been gradually raised within the last quarter of a century, and perhaps more perceptibly within the last decade. In the United States, it may be said, a sober and temperate people have become a somewhat more carefully discriminating people. They choose with greater circumspection and care than formerly, and therefore are not so easily pleased or amused by the suggestive or profane. But they are better pleased, and therefore more appreciative, when appeal is made to the higher sensibilities. There is no doubt that there is an increasing appreciation of the clean and constructive. This is indicated by the refusal of the public to accept, or at least to patronize, many objectionable or questionable plays offered by the legitimate theaters. As the realization grows that the patrons of the theaters and the parents in the homes hold the controlling vote, the standards will continue to be raised. There is much that is right with the movies Just as truthfully it may be said that there is much that is wrong. But gratifying progress is being made in effecting those reforms which are, perhaps, more intangible than concrete more foundational than merely superficial. It is fundamental, and not conjectural, merely, that in the past, as well as in the present, the amusements which attract and engross public attention, and which are supported by public patronage, fairly reflect the moral and intellectual status of the people. None should hesitate to admit, this being the case, that whatever is right or whatever is wrong with the movies is a reflection, direct and unmistakable, of a governing and controlling public thought.,

While Section 315 of the Fordney-McCumber tariff act, giving the President authority to proclaim an increase or decrease in the rate of duty on imported articles, after an investigation by the Tariff Commission had shown the differences in production costs in the United States and in competing foreign countries, was pending in the Senate, it was opposed by Senators Borah of Idaho, and Walsh of Montana, who claimed that it was in effect a delegation of the taxing power to the Chief Executive, and therefore unconstitutional. The contrary view prevailed, and the provision for changing the rates of duty by presidential proclamation became law. Following the enactment of what is held to be the first American tariff that could be substantially increased or lowered in all its schedules by executive action, an opportunity was sought to have the issue of its validity passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States. It was necessary to wait until action was taken in raisin, or lowering some specific rate of duty, and even when the rate had been changed on certain articles, it was found difficult to present a case that would compel a decision by the courts on the fundamentals involved.

By those affirming the constitutionality of Section 315 it is contended that the power conferred on the President is merely that of ascertaining certain facts relating to production costs, and that in proclaiming an increase or decrease of duty he is only registering the will of the Congress that the duties on imports should cover the difference between domestic and foreign costs. It is also contended that the law does not make the President the final arbiter in a dispute over rates, but that he is the instrument by which the established facts of comparative production costs are so registered as to raise or lower duties as those facts may

Those holding that, whatever its form may be, the section in reality confers on the President authority to change a law of Congress according to his judgment profess to find in his recent decision in the sugar duties case a justification for their claim that the law is unconstitutional. It will be remembered that in this case a majority of the members of the Tariff Commission found that the facts concerning production costs justified a decrease in the duty on foreign sugar. The President declined to proclaim a reduction of the duty, and in so doing. it is claimed, substituted his own judgment of the situation for the conclusions reached by the Tariff Commission.

On this ground preparations are being made for a test case in which it is hoped that the courts will determine whether the law is mandatory upon the President to act in accordance with the facts as ascertained by the Tariff Commission, and if not, whether the authority to raise or lower duties as he may see fit is beyond the constitutional powers of the Congress to confer. In view of the importance of the issues involved it would seem highly desirable that the Supreme Court of the United States should pass upon the validity of the law, so that all uncertainty as to its future application may be cleared up.

It would be impossible that no good results should follow the thoughtful discussion of marketing problems under the favorable auspices provided by the Philadelphia meeting of the American Institute of Cooperation. Those present, as well as those who read the published accounts of the sessions, will undoubtedly be awakened to a clearer realization of the great economic advantages of a close contact and interchange between producer and consumer. But the inclination is to suspect when one analyzes what has been accomplished in the United States along the line of co-operative marketing, and contrasts it with the admitted advantages that might be gained by a more thorough application of proved methods that the need at the moment is not for the exposition of new theories, but for the putting into actual practice of the methods which are known to be helpful.

Lessons in Co-operative Marketing

Co-operative marketing, as the term is understood when understood aright, means much more than a united effort on the part of the producers of farm crops, such as wheat and corn, potatoes, meat and the output of the dairies, to pool their output for the purpose of holding it for a high price. It means, it should be realized, co-operation between the producers and the consumers in carrying out successfully the most beneficial methods of marketing and the elimination of whatever proportion of middlemen's profits can be reasonably dispensed with. This presupposes co-operation on the part of the consumers, without which there can be nothing approaching co-operative marketing by the farmers and gardeners, the orchardists and the dairymen.

Such a method, if successful and profitable to all concerned, must be based on the elimination of the delivery wagon, for which the market basket and the spacious net-bag must be substituted. In one of the larger cities of the eastern section of the United States recently there were counted, near the rear doorway of a large retail grocery in one of the residence districts, ten horses attached to delivery wagons, and ten drivers awaiting their first consignment of packages for the day. It may be a little difficult for the layman to estimate the percentage of added cost to the consumers which this single item in one store's economy represents. But the ten horses might easily represent an investment, at present prices, of approximately $2000. The ten wagons would cost when new not far from $1000, and the harnesses a total of close to $500. The interest on this investment, the cost of upkeep, maintenance, deterioration, and the wages of the ten drivers, which is no inconsiderable item in times like the present, must be paid. Admitting, for the sake of the argument, that this charge is divided proportionately between the producers and the consumers, it would seem to be to the advantage of both to take steps to bring about a reduction.

It has been insisted that the farmers refuse to co-operate at their wayside stores and stands, and that they persist in demanding for the products dispensed prices as high as those charged in the city stores. If this is a fact, then the farmers have much for which to blame themselves. The automobile is carrying thousands of customers to them every day, and it would carry more, perhaps, if inducements in the form of lower prices and fresher goods were offered.

This all brings us back to the proposition that the need is not for more or newer theories regarding co-operation, but for more practical cooperation. The American housewife is told how successfully the system is being operated in Denmark, and in other European countries. Perhaps the success achieved in those countries is traceable to the absolute necessity of providinga marketing system which eliminates all superfluous or unnecessary profits. It may be that not until this same necessity spurs the American buyer seeking goods, and the American producer seeking a market, will it be found convenient to stop the economic leaks that now

Gradually there are being brought to light some of the grounds on which are likely

Uncovering

the Foes

of the Forests

to be based the attack on the United States Forest Service at the next session of Congress, warning of which was given recently by Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania. The friends of American forest development and preservation ought to be kept informed of the hostile plans of certain politicians and private interests that aim to break down the work for the forests which has accomplished so much for the benefit of the whole people in the last few years, and to exert all their influence on disinterested senators and representatives in order that the selfish schemes that are really aimed against the general welfare of the country may be frustrated. Nothing will help in this direction more than publicity. All machinations for private gain at public expense depend for success on darkness. Light withers them and brings them to naught.

Dispatches from Washington disclose that two elements are mainly involved in the campaign against the forests. First there are those senators who seem to think they see political advantage in the situation. Secondly, several large stock growers complain that the Forest Service is giving too many privileges to small stock raisers and small homesteaders. A subcommittee of the Senate Public Lands Committee is now holding hearings in the west to give the large stock raisers an opportunity to file complaints against the Forest Service. It is likely that ammunition for broadsides against the service will be gathered at these hearings.

Two chief proposals for weakening the Forest Service already have been put forward. One is to take from the service the administration of the public grazing lands and to place it in the hands of the Interior Department. Memories of what happened through a similar transfer of the naval oil leases should serve to block this plan at the outset. It is interesting to remember an attempt was made some years ago, fortunately without success, to have the grazing lands taken from the Forest Service, and also to have that service placed under the control of the interior Department. The second plan of the forests' foes is to have this scheme adopted. and, taking the Forest Service away from the Department of Agriculture, to put it under the Secretary of the Interior. It is only necessary to state that proposal to understand what it

At present the grazing lands administered by Chief Forester Greeley amount to about 90,-000,000 acres. On this land about 8,500,000 sheep and cattle graze. This represents 75 per cent of the sheep and cattle in the western states. About 35,000 individual owners of sheep and cattle use these lands for forage. In effect these range lands are a public common. They should be administered for the common welfare and should be protected against private exploitation. The Forest Service claimed the right, and for years has possessed it, to regulate these lands so as to prevent injury to young timber, interference with watersheds and other harm to the public interests. That this work has been well done is proved by the fact that no complaints against the service have come from the small stockmen, and that opposition has been confined to the few big interests that seek to work their will with the public domain without interference.

It seems quite plain where the interests of the American people lie as between these opposing forces. If the friends of the forests keep wide awake and see to it that the masses of the people, who are appreciating more and more that the woods are the very foundations of national welfare and prosperity, are informed of the plans of their foes, all hostile moves will fail.

Editorial Notes

Not long since the Southern Agriquiturist ran an editorial under the caption, "The County Papers Tell the Important News." This article told of the receipt by the Agriculturist of three county papers, the Lebanon (Tenn.) Democrat the Ashboro (N. C.) Courier, and the Grayson County (Ky.) News. The first of these had "a big line all the way across its first page to say, The Toll Gates Have Gone,' a piece of news that means more to that county than almost anything that has happened in it for a long time." The second told about "the first carload shipment of live poultry made from Randoph County-another piece of real news because it marks the beginning of a new era in the marketing of an important farm product in that county." The third stressed an act of neighborliness which was inspiring to all who read concerning it. And this is the comment of the Agriculturist:

As long as such things take place no one can say or think that the old country spirit of neighborly kindness and helpful co-operation is dead. And proof that this spirit is still active in the hearts of men is more portant news to Grayson County, and to the world, than the tale of any murder or divorce suit.

History in Nursery Rhymes

Behind the apparent nonsense of children's tales and nursery rhymes there runs in many instances a thread of history or legend. The meaningless word may prove to be a valuable relic of a forgotten era, full of mystic glamour, a survival of the language of a race that is now

Stories such as "Puss-in-Boots," "Jack the Giant Killer," "Cinderella," "The House That Jack Built," have their counterpart in many languages; others have a sober origin in fact even when they seem most airy and imaginative. To the latter class belongs "Little Jack

It is related that John Horner, steward of the Abbot of Glastonbury, was sent to London with a Christmas pie, as a gift for King Henry VIII—a pie containing the title deeds of several manors in the county of Somerset. On the journey, it is alleged, he "put in his thumb and pulled out a plum"—he abstracted the title deed of the manor of Mells and kept it for himself!

This incident is said to have occurred about 1537 A. D. Glastonbury was then one of the tich st abbeys of the kingdom, and Richard Whiting, the las. abbot, is mentioned several times in state papers as unding Christmas gifts to the King.

Whether the pie story be true or not, the fact is indisputable that John Horner and his brothe. Thomas managed to get possession of several of the estates of the church when Glastonbury Abbey followed in the wake of so many others and was dissolved. The story it pr served in Latin verse:

Sedens Johannes parvus in Little Jack Horner sat in a angulo corner, Hornerus edit crustula Chris- Eating his Christmas pie; tinica, Et dixit, ut pruna extra- With his finger and thumb he Pollice, "Quam sum ego suavis Saying "What a good boy am infans!"

4 4 4 The story that masquerades as "Little Red Riding Hood" is simply a myth of sunset and sunrise, and is known in many lands. The hood is a symbol of the red dawn, while the wolf represents darkness. In Norse mythology the wolf Fenrir devours the sun. The English version of the incident leaves the story unanished; but the Germans, in "Rothkäppchen," tell of the arrival of the hunter, who slays the sleeping wolf, and thus enables Little Red Riding Hood to escape sate and sound. It is the world-wide ancient myth of the red sun being swallowed up by the monstrous darkness of night, only to be disgorged at sunrise.

"Jack and the Beanstalk" is more than a fairy tale— it is an allegory. The giant represents Odin, who ewns three great prizes: a harp (the wind), bags full of treasure (rain clouds), and a red hen which lays golden eggs (the genial sun). The Jack (generic name fo who seizes and utilizes these possessions will surely

Jack the Giant Killer is merely a personification of military prowess. He owed his success to the ownership of four marvelous objects; an invisible coat, a cap of wisdom, shoes of swiftness, and an invincible sword These typify the four cardinal military virtues: secrecy of plans, wise counsel, swiftness in attack, and last, but not least, dauntless courage.

The legend of "Cinderella" appears in various forms in the folklore of many nations. She is the German Aschenpüttel (from "Asche," ashes); she is Pepelluga in Serbia ("pepel," cinders); she becomes Kopcluszek in Poland ("kopec," soot); and in Sweden her name is Askesis ("asken," ashes).

In the English form of the story she loses a glass slipper—which is a faulty translation of "pantoufie de vair" (fur slipper). The error, however, is useful, as it serves to show that the story had been handed down orally from a remote period. While, in the fourteenth century, vair was used extensively on the garments of the pobles it was appearable as little known when the nobles, it was, apparently, so little known when print-the nobles, it was, apparently, so little known when printing came into vogue that it was mistaken for the then commoner word, verre (glass).

In the Egyptian story, of the time of Rameses II, a lock of hair is the clue; in the Greek legend, her sandal is borne away by an eagle and dropped near Psammetichus, the King of Egypt—and in each case, of course, the King searches her out and marries her.

The English schoolboys' game, where a boy "sets a back" against a wall, and a number of other boys leap upon it one after another, holding up fingers and shouting: "Buck, buck, how many fingers do I hold up?" is a game that was played in Rome in the days of Nero. a game that was played in Rome in the days of Nero. a game that was played in Rome in the days of Nero. Petronius Arbiter, in "Satyricon," speaks of a boy jumping on another's back, crying: "Bucca, bucca, quot sunt hic?" ("Tell, tell, how many are there here?") Fancy runs amuck when we think of English boys of the twentieth century playing games that were common in the streets of Rome when St. Paul was a prisoner there.

> Hark! hark, the dogs do bark, The beggars are coming to town-Some in rags, and some in jags, And some in velvet gowns.

The "Beggars" (Gueux) was the name assumed by the confederated nobles and malcontents of the Nether-lands who opposed the tyranny of Philip II of Spain and attained considerable power. The Regent, Margaret of Parma, was somewhat timid at the boldness evinced by the members of a certain deputation, and seemed inclined to yield to their demands, when one of her council whispered that she "need net be afraid of these gatherings of beggars." The deputation overheard the remark, and the whole movement assumed the name "Gueux" defiance.

The story of "London Bridge Is Broken Down" is said to include occult reference to the widespread custom of human sacrifice as a propitiation to the spirits of earth and water at the foundation of a bridge.

In this case the bridge has fallen down, and all attempts to rebuild it are regarded as likely to eventubte in failure. Therefore a sacrifice must be made, and a victim is obtained by the capture of a straggler. The action in the game, where the last comer is seized, is eloquent of the dark rites of the past. The rhyme, in its familiar rendering, runs:

London Bridge has fallen down, fallen down, fallen

London Bridge has fallen down, My fair Lady! How shall we build it up again, up again, up again, Hew shall we build it up again, My fair Lady? Build it up with lime and stone, . . . Stone and lime would wash away . . . Build it up with iron bars . . . Iron bars would bend and break . . . Get a watch to watch all night . Suppose the watch should fall asleep? . . . Get a dog to bark all night . Suppose the dog should get a bone? . . . Get a cock to crow all night . . . Suppose the cock should fly away? . . . What has this poor prisoner done? . Off to prison she must go, My fair Lady!

Gleanings From Vienna

Vienna, July 9 After a delay of twelve years, the University of Salzburg is again to hold summer school classes. The encouragement given by the success during the past two years of somewhat similar courses in Vienna has probably led the Salzburg authorities to take up again this tional work which was interrupted by the war. It is interesting, however, to note that emphasis is to be almost entirely on Pan-German subjects, and this may be some slight degree as propaganda to strengthen the relations between the peoples of Austria and Germany. The professors who will deliver the lectures are selected entirely from the ranks of noted German and Austrian scholars and natural scientists. "German National Economy," "German Poetry," "German Law," and other kindred matters will be discussed at the summer school. The classes will last from August 31 to September 5.

Vienna is much interested in the proposal of the Danube commission to open the Danube river to seagoing steamers in order to connect the countries of Central Europe directly with eastern ports without transshipment from the Black Sea harbors. Hungary has already proposed to establish a common fund from among the countries of the Danube valley in order to finance the project and is further ready to disposal of the engineering experts plans for such an undertaking which had been drawn up prior to the war but which have never been realized. These plans are said to be complete in most details. It is also understood that the Danube commission has offered to apply to the League of Nations for a loan to carry the project forward. interest on which would be paid by the states

Paul Willi, director of the Dresden Neu Städter Schauspielhaus, recently told the representative of The Christian Science Monitor that he hopes to move most of his company to Vienna in October and to open a new theater here of serious drama. For seven years, Herr Willi conducted his theater with success at Dresden, and his finest productions were plays by Gerhart Hauptmann. Bernard Shaw, George Terramare Henrik Ihaen comedies from Shakespeare, Franz Werfel, Georg Kaiser and Max Mell. He hopes to commence in the fall with three new plays: "The Wife of Akiba," by Moritz Helmann, a German; "Fulfillment," by George Terramare, and "Para-dise," by Albert Trentini. Whatever Herr Willi brings is sure to prove interesting, and since his purpose is to keep his class of plays as clean as is possible his influence among the Vienna theaters should prove to be in the right direction. He will bring with him Fraulein Annemarie Frey and Albert Willi, his brother, as the two leading members of his cast and will also gather others from the Vienna stage. 4

An effort is being made in Austria, which will have the sympathy of all interested in the prohibition movement, to encourage the drinking of milk in place of alcohol. Milk stalls are gradually invading the playgrounds and parks, and it is now proposed to erect dairy shops ("Milchtrinkhalle") throughout all towns and in tourist centers. Milk is still being imported into Austria each year to the extent of several thousand dollars, and the campaign now under way also has for its purpose the increase of the Austrian supply to the point of doing away entirely with milk from abroad. Vienna uses daily 800,000 liters, which is almost as much as before the war, and the entire amount is furnished by the home dairy industries. The single province of Lower Austria furnishes today as much as did the whole of the present Austrian territory before the war, and since the establishment of milk trade restrictions, the Austrian production has risen 600 per cent.

The largest film industry in Austria, the "Sascha Company," has just made public the fact that it will move to Berlin, owing "to the unfavorable market and fiscal conditions" here. The difficulties of film production in such a small country are obvious, especially since export restrictions are so severe and since the market here is already crowded with foreign films. A meeting of Austrian film interests held recently declared itself in favor of restricting the imports. This would affect principally the American and German films, which are by far the most popular here. * * *

In connection with the greater use of milk. It is worth noting a fact brought out in a recent debate in Parliament about the adulteration of wines imported that the con-sumption of wine has diminished by 50 per cent in Austria. All this trend goes hand in hand with a meeting held recently of district school teachers. The subject of the conference was "School and Alcohol." The majority agreed to urge the influence of the teaching body as a whole against alcohol. The teachers are instructed systematically to educate their pupils away from all interest in alcohol. The lead was taken by the "Teachers' Abstinence League," whose purpose was to arouse all teachers to a full sense of their responsibility and to a desire to check in every way the drink evil. It was said at the conference that "one generation of abstinence education will so change the character of the people as to make the future generation free from any desire to indulge in

Golf is very slowly, but gradually, gathering new devotees in Austria. A person carrying a bag of clubs is still asked what the strange things are, and in most of the sporting goods stores there is no golf equipment to be found. The one golf course in Austria is in the Prater Park in Vienna; it has not long ago been extended to ten holes and is getting in excellent shape. The course is placed in deep meadows and the hazards are many and interesting. The membership at the Vienna Golf Club is growing steadily, and foreign visitors in particular are most cordially welcomed. It is now suggested that golf courses are to be laid at Baden, Salzburg, Ischl and Reichenau as an additional-if neededbait for the tourist from northern and western countries

Progress is being made in carrying through the reforms stipulated by the League of Nations. The last two measures were introduced into Parliament 8 and referred to the reform of Postal Savings Institute and the reorganization of agricultural administration. The most important questions of state administration and state constitution reforms are now being debated and it is anticipated that a solution will be found soon. Another bill of importance is that known as the "Incompatibility Bfll," which draws a line between government and business. A government official can no longer, generally speaking, hold office in private undertakings and in stock companies. During his term in the Government, he must drop his connection with such outside interests. There are certain exceptions made, but the main point is covered that no man will in future be put the company's welfare ahead of the state's or to make capital out of his connection with the Govern-

From a Prohibitionist in Queensland

To the Editor of THE CHBISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Some good friend was kind enough to send me a couple of issues of your valuable journal embodying some very refreshing views from your editorial pen on the—to me—engrossing subject of prohibition enforcement in your great country.

The utter meanness and conscienceless greed of the liquor crowd in forcing their abominations into United States territory, in parefaced defiance of law and every good feeling between friendly nations, almost defy description. I have written repeatedly to the British Minister, expressing indignation and urging government intervention to put an end to the disgraceful

It is a most gratifying experience to read of Sir (sic) Broderick Hartwell's discomfiture and loss over his last (may it prove so) and biggest shipment; the only way hese gentry can be made to feel is through their pockets, their only vulnerable spot.

"Right is Right," and must prevail. Never doubt that there is a strong contingent of ardent well-wishers in all our states, men like P. B. L. Hammony, Arthur Isombes, and Gifford Gordon, who rejoice in your successes and will acclaim with joy and thanksgiving your

The Size of America's Paper Money To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

While there is so much being written at this time about the cost of printing a dollar bill, I would like to say that for years it has seemed foolish to me for the Government of the United States to issue paper money in its present large size.

bills in general circulation could be just about one-quarter their present size and still be large enough for all uses. Such a reform would not only result in a saving in paper and printing, but also in a saving throug longer wear, for such bills would not have to be folder as the larger ones are.
